34th Concacaf Ordinary Congress

United States / March 2019

Welcome to the Congress

To our Member Associations' Presidents, Delegates and Guests,

We begin this welcome letter for our 34th Concacaf Ordinary Congress with a great sense of pride about Concacaf. As we look back on last year – in fact, the last three years since our administration took office – it is remarkable how much our organization has accomplished on our journey to move football forward throughout the region. We are ONE family that works within a culture defined by a love for our game, with ONE mutual goal of becoming champions, on and off the field.

Guided by our brand pillars of Unity, Football, Quality and Access, we continue to make excellent progress in the execution of our regional strategy. As a result, we are happy to report on another record year for our Confederation.

First, from a competition standpoint, we have seen the introduction and expansion of tournaments aimed at raising the quality of Concacaf's football, while creating more access to all of the game's stakeholders.

- There is tremendous pride in the launch of the Concacaf Nations League. When we see the results and emotions from our federation's presidents, coaches, players, fans and the media, we can already perceive how our joint efforts are generating benefits of increased competition and development for the Confederation as a whole.
- The expansion of the Concacaf Gold Cup, from 12 to 16 nations, is another signature achievement. More importantly, for the first time in the 15 editions of the competition, we are bringing our top national team championship to a Caribbean and Central American pitch.
- The expanded Concacaf Club Competition Platform includes the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League (SCCL) – as well as the Scotiabank Concacaf League (SCL) – which gives the opportunity for more teams to compete. The Flow Caribbean Club Championship and Concacaf Caribbean Club Shield provide a direct pathway to the Confederation's top regional club championships.
- Winning the bid to host the FIFA World Cup 2026 in our region is a big source of pride for the entire Concacaf family and the Member Associations of Canada, Mexico and the United States. Thanks to a collaborative strategy and the solidarity of all our federations, we will make history by hosting for the first time a 48-team World Cup in three countries.

Second, we remain focused on key development initiatives across professional football, youth development, coaching education and refereeing.

- Since 2016, we have increased our investment by 43 percent in our One Concacaf Funding Program (OCP) – a platform to help boost the development efforts of our 41 Member Associations – as well as in technical, refereeing and professional football development.

- Our system of club competitions is the main driver for development starting from the amateur ranks to the pinnacle of professional clubs. We are helping clubs and leagues to develop the right structures and become more professional by providing club licensing initiatives to improve football at all levels.
- On the professional football side, we presented the Member Association benchmarking survey at the Presidents' Meeting in Bradenton, FL last year. The results, expected during the first half of this year, will lay the foundation going forward for our development programs, while serving as a model for incentivizing and future planning.
- Empowering Associations to design and develop their own in-house coaching education system has been one of our goals. This was completed through the Train the Trainers Program, which has been implemented across 30 Associations. Over 13,000 youth players have been impacted by coaches certified through this program.
- We are also conducting licensing efforts across the region. Over 35 coaches from Central America have been certified with our Concacaf C License. Most importantly, 25 of them are now coaching their youth national teams.
- Through the Scotiabank Next Play Cup and Academy – which had its pilot staged in the Caribbean – we are promoting access to football, while leveraging the game's power to drive social change.
- We are also revamping our youth competitions and the Program for Referee Excellence held with the FEMEXFUT in Mexico, where the main beneficiaries have come from the Caribbean and Central America. The impact of PORE is clear as three graduates earned their FIFA badge in 2018, five graduates whistled a game in the 2018 SCL and one referee from the Asian Football Confederation participated as part of a referee exchange. Additionally, the Concacaf Nations League Qualifiers have seen officials from the 2017 PORE class on the field.
- We are also very proud that a trio of women's referees from Concacaf officiated the 2018 FIFA Under-17 Women's World Cup Final between Mexico and Spain in Uruguay.

Third, we continue making great strides in delivering business results and enhancing operating performance to better serve our Member Associations and remain successful across the Confederation.

- We continue delivering tangible value and service excellence to our 41 Member Associations, providing assistance on several areas instrumental to support the growth of each federation and the sport. We have aspired to create a true culture of service to our members in order to assist them in their operations and projects.
- We have deepened partnerships across the international football community with FIFA, our fellow Confederations and other international organizations by collaborating to enhance access and provide value for Concacaf members across the board.
- Trust is critical for our Concacaf family and within the football industry. Championing good corporate governance is our priority, while also ensuring the efficient use of resources, accountability, integrity, and safeguarding our policies.
- The bedrock for our success remains our steadfast commitment to financial discipline. We have a strong cash position, robust risk management systems and business planning frameworks to increase efficiencies across our Confederation.

- We also reached another watershed moment through the rebranding of Concacaf and the opening of our new home in the heart of Miami's business district, which speaks to the administration's innovative corporate vision and its forward-thinking approach.
- We are strengthening our brand across all our properties with new assets and marketing campaigns that drive further visibility for Concacaf, while maximizing the opportunities to engage Member Associations, fans, sponsors, broadcasters, and media across our platforms.
- We are actively working with our core sponsors and broadcast partners such as Scotiabank, Univision, FOX Sports and Flow Sports to strengthen our partnerships and add value to our mutual goal of growing football.
- We continue to identify the best opportunities to bring new business partners to our game. Earlier this year, for example, we signed a multi-year agreement with FloSports, providing the exclusive English-language broadcast rights in the United States for the Concacaf Nations League. This is an extraordinary opportunity to engage English-speaking fans and increase the exposure and value of the competition.
- We are building up our distribution and digital capabilities. Through Concacaf GO, our first-ever Over-The-Top (OTT) direct to consumer platform, we provide our Member Associations with access to watch their teams and our competitions. Today, we have more than 80,000 subscribers. Our efforts in digital media are paying off with outstanding results, generating 39 million impressions across our digital platforms. The newly-launched ConcacafW Instagram channel is also growing an important audience, enabling us to raise awareness and inspire participation in women's football.

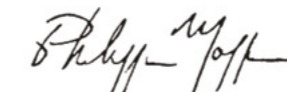

Collectively, these assets are creating a stronger Concacaf for the long-term. As we prepare to develop Concacaf 2030 – our vision on how we will preserve and achieve progress for years to come – we are confident that by working together as a family, we will continue managing any challenges and maximizing the opportunities for all our 41 Member Associations.

Thank you for your continued support and we appreciate your trust in our administration.

We wish you a pleasant stay and look forward to spending time with you in Las Vegas. If you need any assistance, please e-mail: congress@concacaf.org.

Other matters for which due notice has been given

2026 Bid

Mr. Montagliani readjourned the meeting and asked Mr. Moggio to introduce the representatives of each of the presenting 2026 Bids. He explained that at the FIFA Congress to be held later that week, there would be voting for the 2026 FIFA World Cup.

Mr. Moggio then called the 2026 United Bid Committee to the stage. Each representative commented on what each country involved with the United Bid, which would be Mexico, USA and Canada, would bring to the 2026 FIFA World Cup and how hosting the FIFA World Cup would benefit the respective countries. A video regarding the 2026 United Bid was shown.

Upon conclusion of the presentations, the representatives were excused from the meeting room and the floor was opened for questions and comments. Mr. Eric Labrador, President of the Federación Puertorriqueña de Fútbol expressed that after hearing from the two groups, it was evident that the football family was very passionate about the sport. He noted that during this historic moment, one Confederation, Concacaf, would present a bid to host the 2026 FIFA World Cup. He recommended that, although to have an individual vote and a voice was a fundamental right of each member association, all Concacaf member associations should unite as a Confederation to support their brothers from Mexico, Canada and the USA in this historic endeavor. He expressed that all Concacaf member associations were co-participants in the endeavor.

Mr. John Krishnadath, President of the Surinaamse Voetbal Bond, commented that while he had expressed concern over some political factors associated with the USA and its government, the basic economic factors of the Bids needed to be considered. Mr. Krishnadath noted that after seeing the presentations and also based on the One Concacaf principle, Suriname would vote in favor of the 2026 United Bid and he proposed that all the member associations do the same in solidarity.

Mr. Wayne Forde, President of the Guyana Football Federation, spoke of the uniqueness of his country of Guyana and said that although only 700,000 people resided there, over 2 million Guyanese people lived elsewhere in the world. He stated that by supporting and endorsing the United Bid, this would afford every Guyanese person the opportunity to experience the greatest show on earth and partake in the true spirit of football.

Mr. Montagliani said that as President and Chairman of the Concacaf Council, he would like to hear the Concacaf family of 41 united member associations demonstrate their support and endorsement of the 2026 United Bid with applause. All applauded in favor of supporting the United Bid.

Mr. Montagliani then proceeded to the next item on the agenda, the Special Recognition.

Special recognition

Mr. Montagliani proudly spoke of the re-establishment of the Concacaf Hall of Fame. He announced that the first inductee to this honorable group would be Mr. Philippe Vorbe, the renowned Haitian midfielder. Mr. Montagliani detailed Mr. Vorbe's illustrious playing career while a highlights reel was shown in the background. Dr. Yves Jean Bart, President of the Fédération Haïtienne de Football, was invited to the stage by Mr. Montagliani to assist with the special recognition. Mr. Vorbe was also invited to join them on stage.

Mr. Vorbe thanked all those present for being granted this honor of being the first person inducted into this new Concacaf Hall of Fame. Pictures were taken and Mr. Montagliani presented him with a commemorative pennant.

Concacaf Council Report to the Concacaf Congress

2018 was a year of great progress for Concacaf. During this year, the Confederation introduced and expanded key tournaments which allowed for greater participation from its 41 Member Associations, furthered the development of football throughout our region by focusing on its development initiatives, and continued to improve and strengthen its business practices.

The Concacaf Council proudly submits the following report to the 34th Ordinary Congress of Concacaf in Las Vegas, Nevada, USA. This report encompasses all events for the 2018 calendar year and details the accomplishments of each division within Concacaf.

Concacaf Summary

Concacaf began and ended 2018 by celebrating significant milestones in its history. In March 2018, the Confederation unveiled its new brand identity to its 41 Member Associations and the world, an event that was streamed via Concacaf.org. This new brand embodied the four pillars of Unity, Football, Quality and Access through its mission and vision, as well as in the logo itself, which comprises 41, four-sided diamonds representing each Member Association and each pillar. The Confederation closed out the year by celebrating the opening of its new home in Downtown Miami. It now enjoys an office space which promotes growth, development, innovation and collaboration.

In addition to those events, Concacaf launched the highly anticipated Nations League which was received with great enthusiasm and positive reaction from the MA presidents, coaches, players, media and fans alike. Football development and business partnerships and strategy took centerstage for the Confederation. Throughout 2018, the administration worked diligently to continue investing in and developing its programs aimed at developing youth and women's football. Concacaf also focused on strengthening existing business partnerships as well as identified new partners that would drive further visibility for Concacaf and maximize engagement.

Concacaf proudly accomplished all it set out to do for 2018 as part of its Strategic Plan. The Confederation's current President and Executive Management set forth a plan with the following strategic pillars; Development, Strategic Planning which included plans to innovate Concacaf competitions and maximize revenue streams, and Good Governance. Under their strong leadership, the goals of supporting the growth of Member Associations and enhancing development programs, enhancing existing competitions, establishing platforms for long-term revenue growth, and ensuring the continued integrity of the organization, were attained. Concacaf was able to support these strategic pillars by implementing sustainable programs that had clear goals that were well executed; created innovative competitions by enhancing existing competitions and elevating them to world-class levels while granting access to all Member Associations; maximized revenue streams by establishing platforms that would allow for long-term revenue growth that were innovative and top notch which engaged the Confederation's strategic partners; continued to work to maintain integrity in all its business and governance practices by adhering to a strict code of ethics, attracting and retaining quality talent and strong leaders, as well as remain consistent in its policies, processes and resources.

On June 11, 2018, Concacaf held its 33rd Ordinary Congress in Moscow, Russia at which an election was conducted for the position of Vice-President (Caribbean) on the Concacaf Council. The Concacaf Member Associations were given updates from every Concacaf Division, including a review of the Confederation's 2017 financial performance and the proposed budget for 2018. Additionally, the Congress welcomed the reinstatement of Guatemala, who had been previously suspended from international, football-related activity.

All 41 Concacaf Member Associations participated in the election for the Concacaf position. Following is the election result:

- Randolph Harris elected as Vice-President – Caribbean

In addition to the elections, the Congress was presented with the 2017 Financial Review and the 2018 Budget. Concacaf continued to show growth and improvement in this area and demonstrated an increase in revenue due to the administration's due diligence and improved business practices. The Congress unanimously approved the 2017 Audited Financial Statements and the 2018 Budget.

Key Reports

Member Services

Throughout the year, Concacaf's goal was to provide unparalleled support and service to its Member Associations. Each division and department played an important and vital role in supporting the 2018 Concacaf Strategic Plan and the overall One Concacaf vision of Leadership through Service. This was achieved by conducting ethical business practices on all levels, being consistent in its processes, and empowering its regional offices in Guatemala and Jamaica so they can immediately and effectively support its Member Associations.

The Confederation provided key governance and administration tools to its Member Associations through various specialized courses and workshops. Concacaf collaborated with UEFA to hold Good Governance Workshops, launched the Team Manager Workshops to train the Team Managers from National Teams and Club Teams, assisted in various statutes review processes to establish a solid, regulatory framework within Member Associations alongside FIFA in some cases, and provided crisis management training, resources and best practices, as well as conducted sessions on the proper execution of Congresses, standing committee meetings and electoral processes.

In addition to these initiatives, Concacaf took steps to ensure that Member Associations had direct access to Concacaf staff across its three offices to advise on Competitions, Development, the One Concacaf Program, Finance, Administration and answer any other questions they would have. In addition, the Member Associations department also led several regional workshops on good governance to support best practices for the Federations.

Concacaf believes in creating valuable collaborations and partnerships which can benefit the region and the Confederation. To that end, FIFA, the Fédération Française de Football (FFF), Koninklijke Nederlandse Voetbalbond (KNVB), and Concacaf signed a collaboration agreement in the Home of FIFA in Zurich, Switzerland, which established a formal framework strengthening their cooperation on football development. Building on their previous successes, Concacaf and UEFA continued to expand their partnership by conducting additional governance workshops and tailoring them to fit the needs of Concacaf's Member Association. The Confederation also expanded its relationship with Soccerex and collaborated with them on the Soccerex USA conference held in Miami in November. As part of this collaboration, President Montagliani, General Secretary Moggio, Concacaf's Chief Football Officer, the Director of Development, and Head of Women's Football sat on panels that discussed the business of football, football development and the Confederation's progress. Member Associations were invited to attend the conference and were given access to these panels and key networking opportunities. Concacaf also partnered with some of its own Member Associations to bring additional trainings and share best practices.

President Montagliani also participated in several other panels, meetings and events to promote and advocate for the development of football in the region and around the world. He and General Secretary Philippe Moggio met with numerous dignitaries, celebrities, heads of state, key stakeholders and business partners during the year to champion and support Concacaf activities, competitions, initiatives, its Unions – UNCAF and CFU – and foster and cultivate key relationships for the Confederation. President Montagliani also proudly accepted the opportunity to be a part of the organization, Sport at the Service of Humanity, which is a global movement inspired by His Holiness Pope Francis that uses the inspirational, unifying power of Sport and Faith to change the world. He is one of four, high-ranking leaders in sport that serve as mentors for young adults participating in the organization's Young Leaders Mentoring Program.

Among the many projects and initiatives that took place in 2018, Concacaf conducted a series of Professional League workshops across the region aimed at increasing the level of play and supporting those Member Associations that endeavor to start their own professional leagues. The Confederation also laid the groundwork to launch a mentoring program for Member Associations Presidents and General Secretaries.

The Concacaf Disaster Evaluation Task Force, along with other key stakeholders, continued its work with those Member Associations still suffering the effects of the devastating natural disasters that occurred in late 2017.

The year ended on quite a high note for Concacaf as it celebrated the relocation of its headquarters to Downtown Miami. This new office will provide Member Associations and key stakeholders a more central location as well as other resources that will support the organization's growth and foster efficient business operations for the Confederation. The celebration, which took place in November and kicked off in grand style with a ribbon cutting ceremony, showcased the modern workspace and welcomed FIFA President Gianni Infantino, Member Associations Presidents, Concacaf partners and stakeholders from across the national and international football community, local dignitaries such as the Mayor of the City of Miami, Mr. Francis X. Suarez, and members of the media to enjoy and tour the new facility.

Human Resources

In 2018, the Human Resources department solidified its position as a strategic and key partner for the Confederation. The guidance provided while making significant decisions about key team players, was received positively and supported the organization in its continued efforts to provide good governance for the Confederation. The department began the year by making organizational changes, which added to the talent found within Concacaf and set the stage for continued success and sustainability for the organization.

Eight talented employees joined the Concacaf family and brought with them a high level of expertise in their respective fields. These additions included two highly qualified women hired to lead the departments of Women's Football and Digital and Emerging Technologies, as well as five Football Administrators and one Web and Digital Specialist.

The relocation of Concacaf Headquarters was a huge undertaking for the organization which required significant time and effort to complete. Human Resources played a significant role in the process and ensured that the workspace and general environment of the new location delivered what was necessary for Concacaf to thrive and so the staff would be comfortable and productive. In this new office, the Confederation's workforce enjoys a more collaborative space and the team can work more efficiently to better serve its Member Associations. In addition, the department leveraged its relationships with its vendors to bring significant savings to the organization while either improving or maintaining employee benefits.

The Employee Engagement Survey offered at the end of 2018 to staff showed significant improvements in overall scores, demonstrating to management that the decisions and actions taken during the year were positively received by everyone.

Communications

The Communications department actively supported the organization throughout 2018 by increasing awareness of all the Confederation's activities across digital and traditional platforms. This group strengthened our relationship with internal and external stakeholder and raised the visibility of our mission to develop football.

Last year, the team collaborated with the Offices of the President and General Secretary and with each of the functional areas of the Confederation to support and promote over 25 national and club competitions, professional football development activities, the Next Play program, refereeing programs, strategic hires, women's football initiatives, governance events and activities, and key administrative announcements and updates. This type of innovative and unique support was part of the department's strategic plan which directly supports the One Concacaf Vision. The department provided a messaging framework and content in alignment with the pillars of Unity, Football, Quality and Access, to ensure effective brand positioning. They also crafted all executive communications for the President and the General Secretary, and messaging for corporate and televised events, and monitored media placements of articles globally and regionally. In addition, the department maintained a high level of responsiveness to sponsor and partner needs and requirements by producing content related to their Concacaf-related activities, like the Allstate Save of the Game. The Communications team also supported all partner and sponsor announcements such as the partnerships with Flow Sports, Rocket League, Verizon broadcast deal, SAVI as the provider of referee uniforms, and collaborated with Scotiabank's Public Relations team for the announcement of their partnership renewal.

The Communications team continued to work closely with local Media Officers to establish storylines and collect information to be used in articles and social media platforms. In addition, the department created and distributed pre-tournament information packages and daily updates that highlighted key storylines for all tournaments. As a result of this effective collaboration, the Confederation's website, Concacaf.com, was able to capitalize on several articles that generated global interest during 2018.

A comprehensive social media communications strategy was also part of the overall plan for the department. This led to the generation of additional content that could be used across digital platforms to garner more views and awareness for all Concacaf properties. The team transitioned to more video-based editorial functions for the 2018 Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League which were test-run by the clubs from each zone within the Concacaf region, Cibao FC - Caribbean, Colorado Rapids - North America, and Santa Tecla - Central America. Through this endeavor, these Clubs acquired tailored video content created by the Communications department. This led to the production of a series of seven videos which promoted the tournament and encouraged fan support. Those assets generated nearly 40,000 views on Facebook and Twitter.

Coverage on social media outlets for other tournaments also increased exponentially throughout 2018 due to increased and comprehensive content. The team worked with the Digital group to develop and expand the corporate hub of Concacaf.com and updated the Confederation's profile for its LinkedIn page to enhance Concacaf's corporate presence and brand image. The team also raised awareness of the Concacaf Nations League Qualifiers driving home the message through The Dream Starts Now campaign, while promoting the opportunities the competition would provide its Member Associations through the production of a series of local, documentary videos. The videos reached an audience of 440,000 fans via social media.

The group worked diligently and successfully to increase media outreach and placement. This included accessibility to President Montagliani and General Secretary Moggio for on-air and print interviews as well as having an active presence on social media. By fostering valuable relationships with members of media outlets throughout the region, the Communications team was able to actively engage print and broadcast journalists and partners which led to greater exposure for Concacaf events. There was an increase in credential requests from journalists across all competitions and coverage levels went up, as well. For example, in less than 24 hours, the announcement of the Gold Cup's expansion and media outreach generated 335 articles in print and online outlets. Coverage of the Concacaf Nations League and rebrand launch event exceeded expectations in reach, depth and sentiment. The reach was 300M+ individuals and almost 600 top-tier articles were generated. The department was also able to secure key media opportunities with major outlets like Univision, CNN en Español, Beln, Telemundo, As, Reuters, EFE, the Chicago Tribune, Sports Business Journal and top media outlets in the Caribbean and Central America.

The Communications team also delivered workshops which prepared participating Member Associations for upcoming tournaments, such as the Nations League Qualifiers, and provided them with insight on tournament media operations and the expected media activities for matches.

In addition to supporting on-field football activities, the department provided event and communications support for key Confederation events, such as the 2018 Scotiabank Concacaf League and Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League Official Draws, the partnership with Soccerex USA which was held in Miami, FL, the opening of the new Concacaf Headquarters in Downtown Miami, and the Concacaf Awards.

Football Division

2018 was a year of continued growth and expansion for the Football Division. An integral part of the Confederation is its competitions and, this past year, this area delivered in a big way. The Concacaf staff in the three offices worked tirelessly to ensure that all National and Club Competitions were flawlessly executed. This focus on excellence allowed for successful tournaments that provided unique experiences for all those involved, from the players to the fans.

Thirteen major competitions were successfully staged in the region. Additionally, key changes were made to tournaments which has led to greater interest, and the first Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League using the new format was executed with great success. This new format revitalized the tournament and increased its relevance and garnered more attention across the region. This was evident in the improved attendance at matches and greater television ratings. The SCCL Final was the most watched football match on any US network ever with 1.5 million viewers on Univision. The tournament also had the best game attendance average in history with over 500,000 fans across 27 games. That was approximately a 50% increase compared to the previous season. This on-field success led to an off the field win with the renewal of Scotiabank's partnership which was announced at the Final. The expansion of the Concacaf Gold Cup to 16 teams was met with great enthusiasm. The announcement last year launched an exciting promotional campaign that elevated the tournament's visibility of the selected cities and led to immediate and increased traction of ticket sales.

The participation of our Member Associations in our National Competitions also increased in most categories. The Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship experienced the highest participation ever in its history with 34 teams. The Under-13 Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League which took place at the Federación Mexicana de Fútbol Asociación, A.C. (FMF) Headquarters in Toluca, Mexico, was the biggest club competition of this age category for the Confederation. All Concacaf Member Associations are participating in the Concacaf Nations League and 35 Member Associations began a new, four-year cycle playing official matches during September, October, and November FIFA windows, which also includes non-FIFA Member Associations.

Concacaf also experienced increased participation and development in its Club Competitions. The SCCL and CL grew from a field of 24 teams to 31 teams. The Caribbean Club Championship, along with the Caribbean Club Shield, expanded the number of participating Caribbean Member Associations from 11 in 2017 to 16 in 2018. Due to a 33% increase in OCP funding, Concacaf Member Associations were in a better position to continue their increased participation in and preparation for tournaments, events and development initiatives.

Concacaf's commitment to the growth of Women's Football was evident. The Girls' Under-15 Championship had the highest ever participation with 26 teams and the Concacaf Women's Championship experienced increased production value and, as a result, had more coverage than ever which led to a 20% increase in its audience across the region compared to the 2014 edition. The tournament also obtained the largest distribution ever in Central America.

The Concacaf Nations League, the new centralized men's national team competition which ushered in a new era of national team football for Concacaf Member Associations, launched in 2018 and was well-received by the media, the fans and Member Associations.

In short, the Football Division's commitment to supporting the One Concacaf vision is seen throughout all its competitions and looks forward to contributing further to the growth and development of the game of football in the region.

2018 Concacaf Women's Under-20 Championship

The Concacaf Women's Under-20 Championship will be remembered as a remarkable moment in our sport's history. Mexico captured its first-ever Concacaf Under-20 Women's Championship title, prevailing over the USA 4-2 on penalty kicks, after their final ended in a 1-1 draw at Ato Boldon Stadium.

Haiti, who celebrated its 40th year of Women's football, booked a ticket to France by defeating Canada, 1-0, in the third-place match at Ato Boldon Stadium. This was the first time Haiti qualified for the FIFA U-20 Women's World Cup France 2018 and was also the first Caribbean team to qualify for this category.

Flow Concacaf Caribbean Club Championship

The 2018 Flow Concacaf Caribbean Club Championship was staged at the Anthony Spaulding Sports Complex in Kingston, Jamaica from May 11–16. After two days of exciting playoff matches, Club Atletico Pantoja took the trophy home for the first time and qualified to the 2019 Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League. The game ended 0–0 between Club Atletico Pantoja and Arnett Gardens FC and it took seven shooters to achieve the final result of 6–5 in penalty kicks. This is the second year in a row, and the second time ever, that a Club from the Dominican Republic qualified to the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League. Portmore United FC defeated Central FC 2–1 in the third-place match to secure a spot in the Scotiabank Concacaf League along with Arnett Gardens FC.

Club Franciscain continued its superb international season by securing the final Caribbean spot for the new Scotiabank Concacaf League. The Martinique club defeated Trinidad and Tobago's Central FC 2–1 in the playoff match. Club Franciscain earned the right to contest the play-off fixture when they were crowned champions of the inaugural Concacaf Caribbean Club Shield, by besting Suriname's Inter Moengotapoe 2–1 in the Dominican Republic in April.

Youth Olympic Futsal, Men's

The Men's Youth Olympic Futsal Tournament at Buenos Aires 2018 provided exciting play for a competition at the Under-18 level during its historic debut as an Olympic sport.

The tournament featured 26 matches over 12 days, which was a tough schedule for the ten teams involved, each of which consisted of just ten players. The competition was fierce and the Concacaf representative, Costa Rica, held strong and earned its only win over the Solomon Islands. The medal winners were Brazil (Gold), Russia (Silver) and Egypt (Bronze).

Youth Olympic Futsal, Women's

The Women's Youth Olympic Futsal Tournament Buenos Aires 2018 was a landmark competition for two reasons; the discipline made its Olympic debut and FIFA organized its first women's futsal competition.

Portugal took the gold, with Japan and Spain collecting the silver and bronze, respectively. The Dominican Republic's participation marked its FIFA tournament debut. They, along with the Trinidad and Tobago team, may have faced fierce competition in their groups, but they gained valuable experience.

A total of 226 goals were scored in the tournament's 24 matches, an average of 9.42 per match, well above the 6.69 goal per game average of the men's tournament.

As part of Concacaf's vision to offer more competitive matches to its Member Associations, the Concacaf Nations League Qualifiers were created and garnered a positive reception.

The Concacaf Nations League began in September 2018 with a one-off qualifying phase. The matches for the final round of the qualifying are scheduled for March 21-26, 2019. The group phase, consisting of three tiered leagues will kick off in September 2019. The top league will end with a Final to crown the Nations League champion, and the competition will also serve to unify the qualifying path for the region's national teams to the newly expanded Gold Cup.

Refereeing

It was an exciting year for refereeing in Concacaf, at both Confederation and FIFA levels. The Referee department's goal of excellence was the driving force behind its programs and activities from grassroots to the elite, and it proved a year of many refereeing "firsts" which highlighted the diversity and range of opportunities available within our Confederation. The following are highlights from 2018:

1. Four Concacaf referees whistled a game at the FIFA World Cup 2018 Russia, compared to three at past World Cups.
2. Concacaf referee trios officiated the final games of the FIFA Club World Cup UAE and the FIFA Women's Under-17 World Cup Uruguay, as well as the semi-final of the FIFA Women's Under-20 World Cup France.
3. Concacaf's non-FIFA members refereed in official competitions (Nations League, Scotiabank Concacaf League, Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship, Caribbean Club Shield) and were selected to participate in the Program of Referee Excellence (PORE).
4. Female referees and assistant referees, after meeting all the requirements, took charge of matches in men's competitions such as the Scotiabank Concacaf League, Nations League and the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship; indeed, the two assistant referees assigned to the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Final were both women.
5. Concacaf welcomed a female referee and her five-month-old baby to the Concacaf Women's Championship which allowed her to gain the experience needed to go on and represent Concacaf as the referee in the final of the FIFA Women's Under-17 World Cup Uruguay.
6. Four of the fourteen referees at the second edition of the Program of Referee Excellence (PORE) were women – the first females to ever participate.
7. Talented non-FIFA referees from throughout the region worked at official competition matches (Scotiabank Concacaf League, Caribbean Club Shield, Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship). This initiative gives opportunities to up-and-coming, national-level grassroots referees, providing a significant educational stepping stone.
8. Six Program of Referee Excellence (PORE) participants were appointed to the FIFA Referee list. Three referees from the 2017 graduating class of PORE earned their FIFA badge in 2018, while another three program graduates will earn that distinction in 2019.
9. Thanks to the Memorandum of Understanding between Concacaf and the Asian Football Confederation (AFC), the Confederations exchanged referee trios for semi-final matches of their respective Champions Leagues. The overwhelming success of this partnership led the Confederations to agree a referee team exchange for the 2019 Concacaf Gold Cup and 2019 AFC Asian Cup.

Cooperation with UEFA was also on the 2018 agenda. For the Concacaf Girls' Under-15 Championship, UEFA sent two female trios as well as a FIFA Instructor.

10. A FIFA-sponsored "Referee Assistance Program" (RAP) Course was held for all French-speaking members of Concacaf. The consolidated course, hosted by the Fédération Haïtienne de Football, was the first jointly conducted offering, and was also the first ever for four Member Associations.
11. The Concacaf Referee Department provided all Tier 1 referees (male and female) and all Targeted Advanced Referee Program (TARP) referees with their own personal referee communication devices to be used in Concacaf competitions as well as in domestic appointments.

The One Concacaf philosophy served as the foundation of the Referee Department's decisions regarding match and course appointments, which ensured cross-regional opportunities and experiences. Match officials were thus exposed to a variety of cultures and styles of play, enhancing their professional growth and development.

The following table reflects the distribution of all match official appointments in 2018 by region:

Region	Total Appointments (referees, assistant referees, assessors)	Percentage
Total	2,128	100%
Caribbean	882	41.45%
Central America	703	33.04%
North	517	24.30%
AFC/UEFA Exchange	26	1.21%

Appointments were distributed in a manner that provided referees and assessors, regardless of region, with the opportunity to gain valuable experience in a competitive and professional environment.

Several initiatives, including training/development courses, benefited grassroots development for Member Associations. The course offerings played a key role in referees, assessors, and instructors building their refereeing "tool chest" or knowledge base.

With the assistance of FIFA, Concacaf administered a five-day Futuro III Instructor course for its Member Associations' Technical, Fitness, Futsal, and Beach Soccer Instructors. The course was held in San Jose, Costa Rica and coordinated by the Federacion Costarricense de Fútbol (Costa Rican Football Federation). It was the first course held concurrently for English and Spanish speakers and 99 instructors from 29 Member Associations participated. The course focused on providing instructors with the latest teaching methodology and materials, with the goal of unifying the message sent to all referees within the Confederation.

At the end of Futuro III, Concacaf held its annual assessor course. There were 50 attendees from 19 Member Associations on a course geared towards solidifying the Confederation's assessment process while ensuring a fair and consistent approach to coaching and mentoring match officials. After three intense days, the assessors returned home with new tools to better provide feedback and coaching to domestic-based officials.

Grassroots, national-level referees were appointed to several competitions and events. The week-long Concacaf Referee Academy at the Dallas Cup included 24 match officials and five assessors from 16 Member Associations. Included on the list of referees were six non-FIFA referees and Concacaf's non-FIFA members.

To prepare referees for the future, Concacaf has taken the progressive step of opening appointments to talented and aspiring non-FIFA referees and assistant referees. This meant domestic league match officials (men and women) being assigned to official Concacaf competitions like the Scotiabank Concacaf League, Caribbean Club Shield, and the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship.

The 2018 edition of the Concacaf Girls' Under-15 Championship provided another opportunity for grassroots referees and assistant referees to be exposed to ten days of training and education from FIFA Instructors (technical and fitness) in an environment that mirrored actual Concacaf/FIFA tournament training structures. The tournament also served as a training platform for 60 Concacaf referees from 19 Member Associations, providing a unique avenue to evaluate prospective FIFA officials. For each participant, their respective Member Associations received a referee-specific, personal evaluation outlining the referee's strengths and development opportunities.

The Concacaf Program of Referee Excellence (PORE) continued to be a milestone program for the development of select key grassroots referees in 2018. For this second edition of the program eleven referees completed six weeks of in-depth technical and practical field-session training leading up the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship in Bradenton, Florida. The referees, representing eight different Member Associations, received the opportunity to referee games in the lower divisions of the Federacion Mexicana de Fútbol Asociación, A.C. (FEMEXFUT-Mexican Football Federation) before their assignments at the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship.

World Cup referee Cesar Ramos (Mexico) participated in the first course held at FEMEXFUT's headquarters in Toluca, Mexico. The involvement of Mr. Ramos gave participants the opportunity to see at first hand the professionalism and passion needed to reach the pinnacle of the refereeing profession.

Many new and challenging opportunities were offered to Concacaf referees because of the partnerships with the Asian Football Federation (AFC) and UEFA. The AFC partnership provided groundbreaking opportunities for Concacaf referees to travel outside the Confederation and work in critical AFC competitions. An AFC trio from Uzbekistan traveled to the historic Azteca Stadium in Mexico to direct the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League semifinal. A few months later, a Concacaf trio traveled to Korea to referee the semifinal of the AFC Champions League. Due to the success of this exchange, Concacaf and the AFC agreed to send trios to each other's prize competition; the 2019 Concacaf Gold Cup and the 2019 AFC Asian Cup. This has given match officials from each Confederation crucial exposure to diverse experiences on the big stage.

Concacaf also hosted two female referee trios from UEFA at the Concacaf Girls' Under-15 Championship. A FIFA Instructor accompanied them to assist with the training and education of the 60 Concacaf match official participants. In 2018, Concacaf proudly announced its partnership with referee uniform provider Savi. The Canadian-based firm developed special uniforms for Concacaf referees and its Member Associations. Every two years, Concacaf's FIFA referees will receive an official uniform and training apparel, while Savi will offer the same uniform to Member Associations at special rates. Each Concacaf referee uniform and training top will be embossed with the term "Excellence", which is the Referee department's motto.

The quality of Concacaf's referees received recognition with recognized by the appointments received for the 2018 FIFA competitions.

For the first time at the FIFA World Cup 2018 Russia, FIFA awarded four Concacaf referees the opportunity to direct a game on the world stage. In the past, only three of our Confederation's referees had been utilized. Cesar Ramos (Mexico) and Mark Geiger (USA) both officiated a game during the Round of 16.

On the women's side, the performances were also superb. The trio of Marie-Soleil Beaudoin of Canada and her assistant referees from Jamaica, Princess Brown and Stephanie-Dale Yee Sing, took charge of the FIFA Women's Under-17 World Cup Uruguay Final. US referee Ekaterina Koroleva, accompanied by assistant referee compatriots Felisha Mariscal and Deleana Quan, were appointed to one of the quarterfinals, with Mexico's Lucila Venegas the fourth official.

At the FIFA Women's Under-20 World Cup France, meanwhile, Honduran Melissa Borjas, accompanied by assistant referees Shirley Perello (Honduras) and Yudilia Briones (Mexico), handled the semifinal between France and Spain. Carol Anne Chenard of Canada took charge of a quarterfinal, assisted by Kathryn Nesbitt (USA), Chantel Boudreau (Canada), and Melissa Borjas.

The year ended with a real highlight as the Concacaf referee team of Jair Marrufo, Corey Rockwell, and Frank Anderson (all USA) whistled the FIFA Club World Cup Final UAE.

In short, 2018 was truly a year filled with many accomplishments. Not only did Concacaf's referees excel at FIFA level, but there were many excellent performances at the Confederation level as well. These successes were a direct result of our partnerships with and the efforts of our Member Associations, as well as the teamwork and support received from our referees, administrators, instructors, and assessors.

Development

The Development department continued to make great strides in 2018 and provided invaluable instruction, support and quality programs for the Confederation. The addition of Mr. Jason Roberts as Director of Development greatly impacted the department and set the course for the year. As part of Concacaf's 2018 Strategic Plan, football development was a primary focus for the Confederation. Through its new program Next Play and new initiatives, the Development department brought valuable information, activities, training sessions, workshops and licensing courses to Member Associations with the aim of growing youth participation and improving the quality of instructors and players throughout the region. Mr. Roberts also participated in a variety of meetings and panels to discuss football development in the Concacaf region, share best practices and increase collaboration with other organizations, other Confederations and FIFA.

Technical Development

After a successful launch of the Train the Trainers (TP3) program in 2017, the program continued to provide valuable instruction in 2018 to participants from around the region. These individuals received top-notch instruction from Concacaf Instructors. Once these participants completed the first phase of instruction, they moved on to the mentorship phase which include practice classroom and field sessions that are recommended prior to the final D or E license delivery.

As mentioned, a key function of the Development department is to provide quality instruction and resources to the Member Associations. The team also coordinated various licensing courses during the year. These courses enabled participants to improve their skills and learn new techniques that will take them to the next level of instruction and coaching as well as allow them to share valuable information with their Member Associations, clubs and teams.

With the implementation of the Next Play development program, greater focus was given to the growth and expansion of youth football within the region, while also ensuring that the children participating in the program were engaged and received proper education. The coordinators and instructors who participated also received the necessary training to help sustain the program. The Next Play program officially launched on May 12 in Jamaica, St. Vincent and The Grenadines, The Bahamas and Barbados. Jamaica hosted an opening festival at the Anthony Spaulding Sport Complex in Jamaica to celebrate the start of the program. Seventy children participated in the event and several former Jamaica international players were on hand to join in the festivities, including Ricardo Gardner (Concacaf Ambassador), Theodore Whitmore (current Senior National Men's Coach), Ian Goodison, Claude Davis, Shavar Thomas, Fabian Taylor and Tashana Vincent of the Reggae Girlz Senior Team. Working towards achieving a goal of increasing the number of young children playing the game of football in an organized environment, the new Concacaf invitational youth tournament

Scotiabank Next Play Cup kicked off in The Bahamas, Barbados, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago. The 5-week tournaments held simultaneously in each participating member association, for kids from 10-11 years old, used football as a tool for education and positive social change.

Professional Football Development

In 2018, Concacaf officials conducted numerous seminars, workshops and compliance visits were conducted throughout the Concacaf region to promote professional development at the domestic level, ensure compliance with Club Licensing standards and increase capacitation in different key areas such as administration, marketing and match operations.

Concacaf also continued with the implementation the Club Licensing Incentive Program, which is aimed at encouraging the proper implementation of systems within Member Associations and rewarding the hard work of clubs in the areas of youth development, women's football and social responsibility. In its second year, Bermuda, Curaçao, Dominica, Haiti and St. Lucia excelled in the implementation of Club Licensing within their country and, as such, received equipment including balls, bibs, cones, goals and ball bags, as an incentive to continue promoting the growth of football at the domestic level.

The Professional Football Development team focused its efforts at the start of the year on assessing the Member Associations and clubs participating in the 2018 Concacaf Caribbean Club Shield. At the federation level, Concacaf ensured that participating clubs satisfied the necessary requirements so that if they won the Shield tournament, they would be given the chance to take part in the play-off match for a spot in the 2018 Concacaf League. The visits were a chance for the Confederation to review documentation within each Member Association and address any gaps in the processes. In regard to the domestic leagues, assessments were conducted on each visit and entailed the development of road maps of the short-term and long-term objectives that each Member Association/league should focus on to obtain the professional Concacaf status necessary to keep participating in regional club competitions past 2021. The following Member Associations participated in these Club Licensing Compliance and League Assessment visits in 2018:

- Feb 26 – Mar 2: Bonaire and Curaçao
- Mar 12 – Mar 16: Barbados and Cayman Islands
- Mar 21 – Mar 25: Grenada and St. Vincent and The Grenadines
- Mar 26 – Mar 29: Aruba and Suriname
- Mar 31 – Apr 6: Martinique, Guadeloupe and St. Kitts and Nevis
- Apr 3 – Apr 4: Guyana

From March 12-15, a Club Licensing Exchange program was held in Chile. This program was designed to provide an educational exchange platform between the two Confederations and it involved a discussion between two Member Associations, Honduras and Chile, regarding the successes and challenges faced when seeking to implement the Club Licensing requirements at the local level. Both Member Associations have set very high standards for their clubs in order to push them to the next level and expect financial compliance, improvements to infrastructure, as well as a focus on their internal strategies. This exchange also opened a door to future collaboration between Concacaf and CONMEBOL in the area of Club Licensing.

The Professional Football Development team also led several other workshops to advance professionalization within the region. They worked with local clubs and key personnel from the Member Associations to provide practical, hands-on experiences and share best practices that would help them further develop the game in their respective countries and improve the quality of team administration.

- League Professionalization Workshop – February 21 – Jamaica
The Caribbean Office hosted the workshop in collaboration with the Jamaica Football Federation and the Professional Football Association of Jamaica (PFAJ). The workshop identified the current state of the Jamaican Premier League and established the next steps towards full professionalization.
- Team Managers Workshops
Concacaf held a series of Team Managers Workshops in the Caribbean with the goal of providing resources and tools to team administrators to help them succeed, while placing emphasis on the Concacaf Nations League matches slated to take place later in the year.

As part of Concacaf's commitment to its Member Associations to provide guidance and support with establishing Club Licensing systems, the Professional Football Development team conducted visits to several Member Associations. These visits consisted of meeting with Clubs and Member Associations' Executive Committees and administration personnel to develop strategies for implementing the Club Licensing program, explaining in detail the Club Licensing requirements and benefits, and the importance of adherence to all deadlines, as well as other aspects of the program. Representatives from FIFA participated in some of these visits and reinforced the importance of observing these guidelines to ensure that all Member Associations, leagues and clubs are prepared for both domestic and regional competitions. Workshops and visits were conducted with the following:

- Puerto Rico – May 1-3
- Panama – May 14-17 & December 17-20
- Guatemala – July 23-25 & August 21-24
- Honduras – September 2-5
- Cuba – September 18-20
- Anguilla – December 3-4

Concacaf also organized workshops in which in where clubs were introduced to marketing basics, such as the principles of creating effective strategic plans, and performing analysis and planning to ensure future success within their market. These were conducted in the following countries:

- Suriname – August 27 – September 1
- Puerto Rico – November 9 – 11

The Confederation hosted the 2018 Professional Football Development Workshop in Honduras from October 31–November 1 to coincide with the 2018 Scotiabank Concacaf League Final. Member Associations' Club Licensing Managers met to review infrastructure, assess ways to improve the management of the Club Licensing system and better understand the roles of the different bodies at a domestic level. They also discussed the switch to COMET for the registration of clubs, players and officials.

Additionally, the Professional Football Development team also attended valuable workshops to strengthen connections with other Confederations and acquire pertinent information that would benefit Concacaf's Member Associations. From July 17–19, the development team attended a National Dispute Resolution Chambers (NDRC) workshop held by FIFA in Panama, along with representatives from FIFPro, the World Leagues Forum, FEPAFUT, Liga Panameña de Fútbol, Asociación de Futbolistas de Panamá, FENAFUTH, Liga Nacional de Fútbol Profesional de Honduras and Asociación de Futbolistas de Honduras y Afines. The meeting focused on the establishment of NDRCs, their purpose, who should serve as members and the timelines for each Federation to achieve a proper domestic implementation. In addition, Concacaf participated also in the UEFA Club Licensing and Financial Fair Play Annual Workshop in Turkey from October 3–5. This event served as a platform to experience at first-hand what one of the top confederations in the world has implemented within European clubs with its Club Licensing requirements. Concacaf was also able to interact with other key stakeholders regarding the women's game and the implementation of these requirements and the development of key financial criteria for clubs throughout the region.

Women's Football

In keeping with the Concacaf's commitment to strengthen and grow Women's Football throughout the region, the former goalkeeper for the Canadian Women's National Team, Olympian and FIFA Legend, Karina LeBlanc, was hired in the Summer of 2018 as Head of Women's Football. She, along with Jason Roberts, added value to the Development department and brought a unique perspective as a player, a coach and motivational speaker to the role in order to create impactful and sustainable women's football programs and initiatives.

Ms. LeBlanc's leadership was immediately felt during the Concacaf Girls' Under-15 Championship that took place in August 2018 at the IMG Academy in Bradenton, Florida. She led the charge in the planning and execution of the "Power of Me" workshops during which the teams were able to identify how football has made them leaders in life, now and in the future, and in the game.

These workshops touched on key points such as confidence, empowerment, resilience, and the power derived through failure and the lessons that come along with it. The girls were taught that female footballers have the potential to change the world while inspiring and impacting those around them. The tournament also provided a unique experience and access to over 500 girls from across the Concacaf region with added support from two invited teams from the UEFA region via the UEFA Assist program. The Girls' Under-15 tournament also experienced increased digital engagement across all Concacaf platforms (see pages 104–105).

For the first time ever, the Concacaf Women's Championship Official Draw was held at the studios of Univision Deportes in Miami, FL in September. The field was set for the eight teams that would vie for the coveted spots in the FIFA Women's World Cup France 2019™. Additionally, and coinciding with the Women's Championship, the Instagram digital channel, ConcacafW, was launched in the efforts to grow awareness and generate increased interest in women's football throughout the Concacaf region.

As part of the department's plans to increase awareness and engagement not just within the Confederation but also globally, Ms. LeBlanc participated in several activities during the second half of 2018 that garnered exposure for the department and its strategic outlook. These events included participating on a panel at Soccerex USA 2018 in Miami, FL with other notable football executives from around the world who discussed current and future commercial opportunities regarding women's soccer; visiting and participating in numerous activities throughout the Caribbean to promote women's football such as the opening of the 11th Annual Women's Premier League and Girl's Grassroots Festival in Barbados and supporting the CFU Women's Committee Workshop chaired by Executive Committee Member Ms. Jeaninne Wong-Loi Sing of Bonaire; speaking at the UN Climate Change Conference in Poland where the topic of how sports, specifically football, can impact climate change and affect the role the human race can all play.

An awareness campaign for the sixth edition of the Concacaf Awards began in late November and in December, over +917K votes were received which represented a significant increase compared to the 2017 voting period.

The Digital team also launched a successful digital campaign in December titled Best Holiday Moments which highlighted some of Concacaf's female players and their favorite holiday stories. These heartfelt and tender stories were shared with fans via Concacaf's main channels, and the SCCL and ConcacafW (Instagram) channels.

Partnerships

Concacaf announced in 2018 the renewal of its wide-ranging partnership with Scotiabank. The new deal that will run until 2022, will see the multinational bank remain the title sponsor of the Concacaf Champions League, while also supporting other Concacaf events including the 2019 and 2021 editions of the Gold Cup.

The Partnerships team closed a strategic partnership deal with Flow Sports in the Caribbean as title sponsor of the newly launched Concacaf Caribbean Club Championship. Included in this agreement was added support for Concacaf development activities.

Additionally, the team successfully planned and executed the inaugural Scotiabank Next Play Cup in Jamaica which was attended by Jamaica Football Federation officials, local authorities, as well as Scotiabank and Concacaf executives.

Media Distribution

In 2018, the Confederation finalized Concacaf Nations League distribution agreements with its partners Televisa in Mexico, and Univision and FloSports in the USA, as well as with IMG for its global distribution. Concacaf also completed rights deals for the 2019 Gold Cup, Concacaf Women's Championship, Concacaf Beach Soccer Championship, and the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship for Honduras, El Salvador and Panama.

The Commercial team secured a key television rights deal in 2018 with Verizon/ Yahoo Sports for the US English-language rights for the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League. The group also renewed Gold Cup rights in most of Central America at an average increase of 18% over 2017.

Broadcast Operations

The Broadcast Operations department continued to produce, in 2018, world-class television broadcasts and video content for Concacaf partners which was viewed by fans and followers on the internet including the Confederation's website, social media channels, traditional broadcast platforms and at corporate events. The department, under the direction of its Emmy-winning Executive Producer and Director of Broadcast Operations, fully produced 328 games across 13 competitions which was almost double the amount of games produced in 2017. These brilliant productions included, but were not limited to, the Scotiabank Concacaf League draw held on May 23 which was broadcast live by Univision and FOX Sports Latin America as well as the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League Draw held at Univision Studios in Miami.

The department supported the pillar of development for Concacaf via its operations by producing and broadcasting the Concacaf Men's Under-20 Championship which was staged at the IMG Academy in Sarasota, FL to all our 41 Member Associations through either Concacaf rightsholders or the Confederation's OTT (Over the Top) platform, Concacaf GO. Additionally, it supported the strategic planning pillar of the Confederation by monetizing archival, Concacaf footage and original content for Concacaf events.

Concacaf and Flow Sports agreed to a multi-year deal for broadcast and digital rights to various Confederation championships. The partnership was highlighted by the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League rights in the Caribbean, which greatly expand the broadcast reach of Concacaf's tournaments across the region.

Concacaf executed an innovative media rights agreement with Verizon. The agreement, which covers multiple Confederation tournaments, would be anchored by having exclusive English-language rights in the USA for the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League. Verizon will leverage comprehensive Concacaf content across its multiple distribution platforms, starting with their digital offerings under the brand of Go90. Yahoo Sports and other Verizon owned platforms will also start covering the matches and the tournament. This innovative media rights agreement is the first of its kind for the Confederation with an exclusive Digital/mobile partner.

The Broadcast Operations team introduced the use of new, proprietary remote production equipment to broadcast the milestone Love For Our Game new brand unveiling and the Concacaf Nations League Qualifiers Draw events in March to the world, with excellent results. The portable equipment will be used at future Concacaf events and competitions including the Concacaf Women's Under-U17 Championship in Nicaragua in April 2019.

Additionally, the department's pre-production efforts for the 2019 Gold Cup continued. The broadcast visits to the venues were completed and the team of directors for the tournament, which includes international talent with extensive experience in live-action sports broadcasts and football, was selected. Broadcast Operations is on track to deliver an amazing production.

Finance & Administration Division

Finance & Administration

Concacaf opened 2018 with the announcement of the completion of one of its most successful financial audits including no significant findings; a testament to the Confederation's enhanced internal controls and processes. Additionally, the Confederation began the new year in a strong cash position to support planned strategic investments in key operational activities. Consequently, a 64% increase in football investment compared to 2016 (non-Gold Cup year) provided Concacaf with the opportunity to launch two strategic competitions: the beginning of the Concacaf Nations League and the expansion of Club

Competitions Platform with the new Concacaf Caribbean Club Shield. Targeted development funds also allowed for further participation in the game through the roll-out of the Next Play Development platform including Next Play Academy and the Scotiabank Next Play Cup.

Concacaf continued its engagement with PwC and finalized the comprehensive internal review process. Each of the identified observations and opportunities, including areas that could benefit from incorporating new policies and procedures, enhanced internal controls, and greater investment in systems and tools, were duly addressed. This has further strengthened Concacaf's on-going compliance with the strictest ethical business standards and operational best business practices.

Furthermore, as part of its efforts to strengthen its culture of service, Concacaf successfully rolled out the 2018 One Concacaf Program (OCP) with several key enhancements. OCP funds were increased by 33% to include funding for Nations League and Office of the President, and collaboration between the Member Associations and Finance Departments has provided a dedicated team to provide full-cycle support for OCP application and reporting processing. Moreover, an internally OCP task force and a new electronic platform were established to streamline the evaluation process.

Concacaf partnered with PwC to provide Member Associations with on-site training of finance and administrative best practices and conducted comprehensive OCP audits of five Member Associations. In 2019, Finance has committed to follow-up meetings with each Member Association to ensure the successful completion of their respective goals and targets. This collaborative approach to the OCP program has allowed Member Associations to implement meaningful programs and competitions.

The Finance department spearheaded several key projects as part of its continuous process improvement and optimization efforts. For the first time, the 2018 detail budget was fully integrated into the accounting system allowing for custom-designed generation and distribution of web-based financial reporting. It provides senior-level and mid-level management with secure, real-time, monthly financial information. Furthermore, this best-in-class financial reporting provides each department with a comprehensive view into their respective monthly financial results, including data segmentation by event. Additionally, Finance collaborated with the Procurement and IT departments to develop an in-house Purchase Order System with the aim of systematizing and automating the procuring, approval and payment processes. Concacaf has scheduled to launch the system and provide training beginning in the first quarter of 2019. In addition, the Accounts Payable team implemented an automated review process in CONCUR, the web-based expense reporting system used by Concacaf, which improved and streamlined expense report processing and increased accuracy.

As it enters the new World Cup cycle, Concacaf placed significant focus on establishing a blueprint for future, sustainable financial growth. Finance worked diligently to produce a detailed, four-year budget (2019-2022). This approach will set the foundation for improved planning, strategic investments and greater sustainability. It has also allowed Concacaf to identify key revenue drivers like the Concacaf Nations League and the Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League.

Concacaf continued its close collaboration with FIFA on several important initiatives, including the FIFA Forward Program. In early 2019, as part of its first partnership meeting, FIFA hosted Concacaf leaders who met with key FIFA officials from various departments to present the Confederation's 2017 development achievements, the use of the 2017 FIFA Forward Program funds, and its 2018 Strategic Plan including football development projects and activities. Discussions also placed emphasis on ways to continue to enhance and strengthen the partnership particularly stressing the 2019-2022 FIFA Forward Program cycle and elements that would benefit Concacaf Member Associations. FIFA held FIFA Forward Development Workshops in Mexico and Costa Rica, as well as a Finance and Governance workshop in Aruba, which were attended by several members of the Concacaf Finance department. Concacaf presented the One Concacaf Program and the Confederation's 2018 Strategy to an audience of FIFA officials and representatives from several Concacaf Member Associations. Throughout the week, the Concacaf delegation participated in constructive, bilateral meetings between FIFA and Concacaf Member Associations to review, discuss and address FIFA Forward Program matters. Moreover, Concacaf seized the opportunity to individually meet with those Member Associations to review and address any pending One Concacaf items.

Information Technology

The Information Technology (IT) department was instrumental in several major projects undertaken by the Confederation in 2018. IT collaborated with the Football Division to automate the competitions management system in an effort to improve, centralize and streamline the process for all of Concacaf's tournaments. Concacaf partnered with Analyticom, a specialized independent software provider, to implement the football management system COMET (Competition Management Expert System). This online platform provided Member Associations with the ability to manage critical information related to their respective participating teams in all Concacaf competitions. The IT department led the Comet implementation and rolled out the new player registration system for Competitions which included the registration and confirmation by Member Associations for each player, coach and official. To support this transition to the new system, the IT department delivered six workshops to train Member Associations, Referees, Team Managers and Club Licensing Managers in the Concacaf region. The IT department continued to expand the capabilities of the platform with the aim of providing solutions for more departments within the organization.

With the opening of the new Concacaf office in November, IT played a major role in the transition. The relocation of the IT Infrastructure was a significant task that was delivered successfully without affecting normal business operations. Due to their efforts and expertise, the Confederation's headquarters in Downtown Miami was outfitted with state-of-the-art equipment and technology capabilities making it a modern, functional working space for the staff based in that office and a hub for future Concacaf activities.

The department also worked diligently throughout the year to support the entire organization in its efforts to streamline workflow and remain efficient. As part of efforts to further standardize equipment, a laptop refresh program for employees was introduced, which entailed the renewal of older machines with upgraded Dell 2-in -1 laptops. In addition to the day-to-day activities of support and maintenance, the IT department implemented the Concacaf IT Equipment Policy, outlining the proper equipment designation per employee role. Along with this designation, the policy outlined the proper use of any Concacaf IT equipment and defined a standard on the types of phones, laptops, and tablets that are approved for use within the Concacaf network.

The IT department continued collaborating with other departments and the Concacaf offices in Jamaica and Guatemala to find innovative and effective technology to improve their work production, such as a ticketing system to track internal requests and projects, office technology to increase video and remote collaboration capabilities and improve communication, and the identification and sourcing of audio/visual equipment necessary for the various Concacaf activities and events throughout the region.

Brand Marketing

The Brand Marketing department played an integral part in the re-branding of Concacaf in 2018. It was a huge undertaking that culminated in the unveiling of the new brand in March 2018 at the Love For Our Game Celebration in Miami, FL. This new brand had a profound impact on every aspect of the Confederation and defined its focus as part of the One Concacaf Vision. The core pillars of Unity, Football, Quality and Access were manifested in the new logo and branding elements.

The logo was designed to be a modern symbol of unity, in a neutral gold, black and white, so that it works well with Concacaf's 41 distinct Member Associations identities. The typeface was modernized and the name Concacaf was set as a word to make it more memorable and user-friendly. The diamonds of the circle represent the four pillars, and create a distinct, Concacaf signature. It was also designed from the ground up to work online, in stadium, and on TV.

The Brand Marketing team executed a flawless Love For Our Game Celebration during which the new brand was celebrated at the Temple House in Miami Beach and also at a special dinner at the iconic Perez Art Museum. The team also introduced the Concacaf Nations League brand at this event in preparation for the start of this groundbreaking tournament in the Fall of 2018.

In addition to this major undertaking, the Brand Marketing team provided complete branding and design support for more than 25 properties and activities during 2018, including the completely new OTT platform Concacaf GO, the 100% women's football focused brand, ConcacafW, and the youth tournament brand system.

The team ended the year on a very busy note with the unveiling of the new brand and creative campaign for the 2019 Scotiabank Concacaf Champions League during its Official Draw in December at Univision Deportes Studios in Miami. This new brand ushered in a new era of the tournament and represented all the aspects that make the SCCL strong, recognizable and respected, as well as celebrating the SCCL trophy.

Events & Travel Service

In 2018, the Events & Travel Services department managed over 40 Concacaf events which included courses, workshops, seminars, meetings, draws and tournaments that were held throughout the region. This amounted to the booking of over 35,000 hotel room nights and ticketing over 4,500 flights for its Member Associations.

The Confederation's high-profile events that engaged the department's support throughout the year included, but were not limited to the following:

- Love for Our Game Celebration
- Concacaf Under-17 Women's Championship
- Scotiabank Concacaf League Draw
- Concacaf Caribbean Women's Qualifiers
- Concacaf Caribbean Club Shield
- 33rd Concacaf Ordinary Congress, Moscow, Russia

Legal Division

Legal and Governance

The key external development of 2018 was the beginning of sentencing and restitution orders being issued in relation to the United States Department of Justice indictments. While a majority of these orders is expected in the upcoming years, 2018 saw initial orders for restitution granted on several items and to various Member Associations, including the Federación Nacional Autónoma de Fútbol de Honduras, the Federación Nacional de Fútbol de Guatemala, the Federación Costarricense de Fútbol, the Federación Salvadoreña de Fútbol and the Caribbean Football Union.

The Committees and Governance department continued to work diligently towards the goal of having committees meet at least once in 2018 to discuss relevant topics affecting Concacaf. The judicial bodies, the Appeals and Disciplinary Committees, met on an as-needed basis throughout the year.

In addition to these meetings, 2018 culminated in a Fall Committees Week in mid-November where four committees met in Sarasota, FL at The Ritz-Carlton Sarasota in conjunction with the Men's Under-20 Championship which took place at IMG Academy in Bradenton, FL. As part of this week, Concacaf hosted a Presidents' Meeting on November 13 at which all active Concacaf Member Associations were represented. During this meeting President Montagliani discussed important topics such as the Concacaf Nations League and the Confederation's long-term strategic plans.

In 2018, Concacaf's Procurement Department accomplished the following goals:

Improving Practices

In order to continue to ensure compliance and transparency in its purchasing activities, Concacaf's Procurement Department developed and disseminated official organizational procurement policies and procedures. These policies provide clear and consistent guidelines for all internal procurement related matters.

Contracts Awarded

The Procurement Department, in conjunction with various divisions within the organization, coordinated and processed a total of 22 formal Requests for Proposals (RFPs) and Requests for Quotes (RFQs), each with a value of $100,000 or greater, with all contracts being awarded based on variables such as vendor experience, qualifications, past performance, proposed solutions, and pricing.

Most notably, in the last quarter of the year Concacaf issued a comprehensive RFP for a global master licensee and licensing agent for consumer products and ultimately awarded a multiyear contract to OEG Sports to serve as the first official and exclusive master licensee and licensing agent of Concacaf.

Translation Services

In 2018, the Translation Department completed and coordinated over 1,200 translations for the organization. Documents included the translation of regulations, minutes, circulars, reports, press releases and other official Concacaf documents into the four, official Concacaf languages of English, Spanish, French and Dutch, for all Concacaf divisions. The workflow was fully channeled through its ticketing system for timely delivery and quality control and handled in large part by the talented team of in-house multilingual translators. This practice limited the use of any externalized translations.

The department also created a 1,300-entry glossary of terms for all four official languages which includes the official names of Concacaf tournaments, and terms and phrases commonly used in the region. The glossary is used both internally and by Concacaf vendors to help standardize all communications, official documents and publications produced by and for Concacaf.

Additionally, the Translations team began the process of implementing a comprehensive translation software suite to further systematize operations.

Dear Concacaf Family,

As the deputy chairman and on behalf of the Finance Committee, I am pleased to report on the beginning of the new World Cup cycle. Driven by the enduring vision of President Victor Montagliani's One Concacaf, the Finance Committee and Administration successfully collaborated to lay the financial blueprint for a prosperous long-term plan which will propel our Concacaf into new heights.

We remain focused on enhancing our financial controls and processes improvement. And in that respect, guided by the principle and pillar of quality, the President and our Administration partnered with PwC to assess every department of the Confederation. Consequently, Concacaf has improved its acquisition of better talent, implementation of new policies and procedures, and additional checks and balances.

For Concacaf, quality both on and off the field is an integral part of its identity. As such, significant emphasis has been placed on the improvement of the budgeting process and controls. The Finance Committee, for its part, has thoroughly reviewed these processes and pledges its unwavering support for these fundamental initiatives.

Together we vouch for the integrity and effectiveness of the budgeting processes and development. The process begins with clearly defined goals and guidelines which originate from an overarching Strategic Agenda that has been accepted and endorsed by the Concacaf Council. As a Committee, we had the opportunity to undertake a comprehensive review of the exercise and to engage in a detailed inquiry of every item allocated to the 2019-22 Budget.

The budget reflects Concacaf's focus on growth, and because of that the Confederation can better invest in Development. There are noteworthy increases in the newly formed Concacaf Nations League, and expansions of both the Concacaf Gold Cup with added teams and geographies and the Scotiabank Concacaf League with additional teams and games, and increasing participation in all development tournaments. Moreover, there are stronger and more strategic plans in Development to enhance technical, refereeing and football professionalization. We are confident that the Confederation has strategically and optimally allocated its resources, and further strengthened its pillars; it will improve the quality of football as it keeps expanding access to the game, and place each of our Members in a better position to compete.

After comprehensively discussing and reviewing the budgeting exercise, and on behalf of the Finance Committee, with great confidence we have recommended the approval of the Budget for the 2019-22 cycle to the Council.

Love for our Game,

Pedro Chaluja
Deputy Chairman of Finance Committee

2019-22 Budget

Process

Through the foundational principles of our One Concacaf agenda and multiple years of well-established financial data, the budget cycle featured a top-down multi-year budgeting approach. The method allowed management to engage each department through an overall corporate functional approach with the aim of establishing departmental budgets that tie to management's overall long-term objectives. Thereafter, each departmental unit and functional area was tasked with developing the specifics on expected expenditures and revenue targets. The finance department consolidated each budget to ensure that all individual units worked synergistically and aligned with the overall objectives of the Confederation.

Furthermore, the 2019 budget cycle marked the first time Concacaf developed a detailed four-year budget giving the Confederation and its Member Associations a blueprint for long-term sustainable growth while adhering to improvements in fiscal accountability and delivery. The 2019-2022 Concacaf budget demonstrates Concacaf's enduring commitment to the predominant principals of our mission to continue investments in football for developing and encouraging participation in the game. The four-year budget was approved by both the Concacaf Finance Committee and the Concacaf Council and now requires ratification by the Congress.

The four-year budget showcases significant increases in Concacaf's investments in competition and development, supported by a noteworthy reduction in general and administrative expenses when compared to the previous cycle. Driven by successful commercialization efforts for new and existing properties, Concacaf is expecting a 40% increase in revenue generated primarily by Nations League, and sustained growth in Gold Cup and Club Competitions values.

These successful rights deals have proved fruitful for the Confederation, providing the opportunity over the next four years to grow its investment in competitions by 56%, including Nations League and Gold Cup expansions.

Additionally, Concacaf will continue its commitment to the development of football throughout the region with a 91% investment increase in this area, including exponential growth of the OCP program and additional investment in technical development, refereeing, and professional football initiatives. All the while, the Confederation is maintaining its financial sustainability by reducing its relative administrative expenses by 3% compared to the previous cycle.

Consequently, Concacaf is expecting the upcoming cycle to deliver a cumulative net income of +$0.2MM, while it maintains a sustainable positive cash position throughout the cycle.

2019 Budget

Revenue

In 2019, Concacaf is projecting a 41% increase in revenue compared to the previous Gold Cup year, rising from $87.6 million to $123.2 million. Concacaf has effectively leveraged investment increases in several core assets to successfully secure a substantial return on investment. The 2019 Gold Cup, an expanded version of its previous editions, is expected to generate a 15% increase in revenue including growth in all key categories: broadcasting, ticketing and sponsorship sales. Additionally, expansive commercialization efforts over the past few years have helped secure new multi-year streams of revenue with the newly launched Nations League and contributed to a broadening of the Confederation's revenue base and diversification of its distribution platforms.

Revenue breakdown 2019

Investments

The Confederation enters the new year in a virtuous cycle of growth whereby recent efforts to enhance and improve key competitions have led to substantial commercialization achievements. These efforts are now paying dividends and providing Concacaf the necessary resources in 2019 to make considerable investments in several key assets including expansions of Gold Cup and Club Competitions, as well as advancements in our development strategies.

COMPETITIONS The 2019 season represents the beginning of a four-year cycle and is highlighted by landmark expansions. In line with the pillars of Football and Access, Concacaf has planned for the direct operations and funding of 15 competitions including the expansion of Gold Cup through added participation and geographical reach, representing a $27.5 million investment. Additionally, Concacaf announced the expansion of the Scotiabank Concacaf League with the participation of 6 additional teams resulting in 12 additional matches and further enhancing the Concacaf Club Competitions platform. Also highlighting 2019 is a $15.7 million investment in the Concacaf Nations League including the final stage of qualifying and the start of the much-anticipated 2019/20 Nations League edition. Overall, the 2019 competitions budget represents a 97% increase compared to the previous Gold Cup year.

DEVELOPMENT Driven by its commitment to the One Concacaf strategic pillar of supporting Member Associations and enhancing development programs throughout the region, the 2019 budget features a 17% increase in all development initiatives including Technical and Referee Development, as well as Professional Football for a total of $11.7 million. Moreover, Concacaf is committed to the continued operational improvement of the One Concacaf Program.

SUPPORT Despite the substantial growth in competitions funding and development initiatives, Concacaf continues to prove its commitment to the reduction and optimization of overhead costs. Specifically, general and administrative expenses are expected to be positively reduced as percentage of revenues thanks to the continuous pursuance of efficiencies.

Investments breakdown 2019

*For expenses analysis presentation purposes - $2.8M Contingency is excluded from the operational expenses

In 2019, driven by landmark multi-year deals, the expansion of Concacaf's competitions platforms, and the launch of the 2019/20 Nations League edition, Concacaf has budgeted a net income of $4.1 million and forecasted a strong year-end positive cash position. The 2019 financial positive outlook represents the culmination of many years of key structural and financial changes, responsible governance, and strategic commercialization efforts; the Confederation and its Member Associations are well-positioned for sustainable growth as they enter a new World Cup cycle.

Next Play

Concacaf Spotlight: Next Play

Concacaf has embraced a mission to inspire love for the game and provide children with access to more opportunities to play football across its 41 Member Associations. The goal is to have each Federation, via its Development department, initiate programs that will demonstrate a social impact using football as a pathway for personal, social and community development.

As a first step in this grassroots Football for Development approach, Concacaf, in partnership with a few of its Member Associations, has piloted the Next Play program. This grassroots initiative is aimed at exposing school-age children to the game of football and mentoring them to promote healthy lifestyles and citizenship skills. The approach draws on experience from the Football for Development sector globally as well as practical experience within the Caribbean. It has been identified as a replicable and sustainable model by those with direct responsibility for its implementation in the wider Concacaf region.

This pilot program has created valuable partnerships by having Concacaf collaborate with Member Associations, Ministries of Sport and Education, affiliating primary schools with a physical education curriculum and identifying a dedicated local coordinator as point of contact for activities. The local coordinator works alongside a Concacaf Regional Technical Director to ensure a successful execution of the program. Local coordinators are participants of the Concacaf Train the Trainer program which aims to develop coaching education instructors within Member Associations.

The program itself has specifically targeted schools and geographies that have identifiable social issues rooted in poverty and high levels of socio-economic deprivation. This pilot program has been developed to identify the opportunities and challenges of implementing a Football for Development approach within a regional context. The lessons learned from this program will inform a longer Next Play initiative and lead to a more sustainable approach for the Federation in implementing projects in the future.

This initial learning will inform a second stage Next Play program to be rolled out in the wider Concacaf region that will be subject to a more rigorous evaluation to identify best practice and sustainability pathways.

"As a developmental tool, what we have here is an opportunity since you have clubs and schools doing it (Next Play). But we want more participation in the game... Concacaf taking the decision to invest at the grassroots level ensures that football continues to be the number one sport."

Andre Virtue, Next Play Coordinator, Jamaica

Jamaica

Next Play Jamaica focused on primary schools in Kingston and Portmore that were identified due to socio-economic issues locally, and to their proximity to two Jamaican Premier League clubs, Portmore United FC and Arnett Gardens FC. The placement of the program near these clubs was designed to earn kudos for the project, identify a link between club and community, and enable coaches to promote and strengthen relationships with young people while promoting football participation and pathways.

In Jamaica the Next Play coordinator was locally recruited from the community and is an experienced football player and coach with international playing and coaching experience, who is committed to youth and community work and development. All coaches involved were physical education teachers and had undertaken Concacaf accreditations at "E" License and/or the JFF Advanced Level 1 course.

Local staff identified a wide range of social issues faced by young people on the program, most notably a lack of access to good education, poverty and irregular employment, single parenting, teenage pregnancy, drug use and substance abuse. Crime, and fear of crime, were strongly identified, as were a lack of self-esteem and resilience in both young people and parts of the wider community.

This strength in staffing, relationships with Concacaf and with professional club networks along with access to trained staff within partner organizations, gave the Next Play program in Jamaica a depth of knowledge and experience that enabled the team to start to address many of the issues raised.

The Next Play Jamaica project delivered football coaching in four primary schools within the school curriculum, supplemented by group work sessions, workshops and mentoring programs that related what was learned on the football field to a wider social context. Staff embraced the wider social impact that football can have and built it in to every element of the program.

Anecdotal evidence and partner feedback underlined the high levels of enthusiasm for participation among project participants, parents, volunteers and schools.

The Bahamas

In The Bahamas, the Next Play program was based around the National Sports Centre and FA Complex in the capital, Nassau, and worked with five primary schools. Participation in football has been identified behind track and field, basketball and swimming in terms of popularity with young people in The Bahamas. The depth of the grassroots community coaching experience was also reported to be shallow, although 27 D License coaches were involved from community clubs and the teachers involved in the program had trained through Concacaf.

The schools engaged in the program were government-run primary schools located in areas of Nassau affected by socio-economic deprivation and the issues brought by poverty, low incomes, irregular work and low aspirations/esteem among young people.

In The Bahamas the focus of the program has been very much on participation and allowing young people to play in a social setting and enjoy sport with the social-impact aspect less to the fore.

St. Vincent and The Grenadines

Next Play in St. Vincent and The Grenadines focused on the communities of Barrouallie, Lowmans, Kingstown and Georgetown and was delivered by teachers and coaches from the local community with D and E licenses from Concacaf. The local coordinator has played football for a number of representative teams and is now a PE teacher. Football is regarded as the most popular sport there, ahead of netball, cricket and track and field, yet there is no consistent grassroots participation program and the club structures are very much focused on winning trophies.

All the areas engaged in this program have low-income thresholds and face social issues – substance misuse, anti-social behavior, gangs and poverty – and a lack of self-esteem and communication skills were noted in many participants. While Barrouallie, Lowmans and Georgetown are rural, Kingstown is the capital and most participants in the project only knew each other because of school. Therefore, work around integration was also key.

Locally the program was a great success with young people very enthusiastic to participate and anecdotal feedback pointing to a positive impact on school attendance. Moving forward, local staff would like to see some more focus on young people struggling in schools or with behavioral issues.

More broadly the program faced problems recruiting volunteers as sport is not really recognized as an employment pathway, there is no real volunteer culture locally and the program has not yet gained traction with the wider community. The view of the local coordinator is that the volunteering program would benefit from proper training and kit.

Female participation was also flagged locally as an issue. Football is seen a 'masculine' sport so investment in female coaches and role models should be a priority; after all, the girls who have participated were enthusiastic and regular attendees.

Overall, Next Play in St. Vincent and The Grenadines has been viewed locally as a great success:

"Next Play is doing something really important and can change the way football is viewed locally. If we can continue... it can provide a development pathway and impact on kids' confidence and lives... the education of coaches, volunteers and parents is key."

Theon Gordon, Next Play Project Coordinator

The Football for Development approach is a new concept for many involved but was seen as an exciting opportunity for the positive social impact achievable through a pathway young people enjoy (football). Input and support from experienced practitioners in this field would help develop the program, along with clear indicators for staff to know their work was effective.

Barbados

In Barbados the Next Play program focused on the parishes of Pine, Vauxhall, Weston and Belleplaine, where football lies behind cricket and alongside athletics in terms of popularity among young people. Barbados is estimated to have approximately 90 D license coaches and 40 C license coaches. There is also a cohort of coaches who are not licensed but have had some formal coaching education from FIFA, Concacaf or the Olympic Association.

Social issues identified by project staff are poverty and low skills, with attendant problems of substance misuse and domestic violence. Gang violence is another concern in these communities where resources and opportunities are scarce – hence the enthusiasm for the program in Barbados among coaches and stakeholders.

The social impact of the project is seen as a particularly important element in Barbados – grassroots participation programs happen on the island on a Saturday and provided Next Play sessions are timed correctly around school terms, the program can help the growth of football as a sport, increase its depth of talent and improve skills bases locally. The additional impact on personal development has been stressed as a key component for the future:

"It is very important that the participants can see a correlation between football and their actual lives, utilizing the values taught during the program."

Renaldo Gilkes, Next Play Local Coordinator, Barbados

Research findings

While recognizing that this has been a short pilot program, the commitment and effort of the local teams and their enthusiastic and detailed responses to research, coupled with input from the Concacaf development team, has allowed us to capture some detailed findings from this stage of the program. Using this evidence, and focusing on common themes across the region, we are able to make a number of initial recommendations.

It should be recognized that there were common barriers in infrastructure inhibiting the program – principally, access to facilities, timings of the project (feedback favored year-round programming), a lack of lighting for pitches after dark, lack of kit and transport for young people. These are investment issues and are presented here for reference as locally relevant and impacting on the program, though Concacaf is aware of these restrictions.

We have broken down the key themes into Football Development, Social Impact, Coach Development and Sustainability and each is summarized below.

Football development

It is clear from all responses that the Next Play program has the potential to contribute to football's growth within the Caribbean in terms of participation, supporter engagement, skills enhancement, talent identification and growing the talent pool. The following key points have been identified as major contributing factors in this process:

- A change in emphasis from winning trophies to a more skills-based and developmental approach focused on fun and learning engages more young people in the game regularly. It also attracts young people with talent but who may not yet have the confidence or resources to engage in more structured or traditional pathways. Building skills and a committed and enthusiastic player base increases the talent pool and likelihood of participation in structured football later in life.
- Engaging with schools and parents and creating a community that is built around the sport of football creates a more supportive environment for players and coaches. If local professional club or national team structures are engaged in this process, even on a promotional level, it also links the professional game to the community, lends kudos to local programs and can enhance the supporter base and potential commercial sponsorships locally.
- Female participation came out strongly as an area for development within the sport, with a desire for more girls' teams, female coach development and competitive opportunities a way for Concacaf to take a real lead in Equality, Diversity and Inclusion issues in the Caribbean region.

Social impact

During the pilot program it would be impossible to claim any long-term changes to individual behavior patterns or community development. However, the following key themes came out of the research and interviews very strongly:

- The Next Play program is well placed to engage with a range of social issues including health promotion (including substance use/misuse and sexual health), tackling crime and anti-social behavior through diversionary activities at key times, mentoring and role modelling through coaches and using sport as a pathway for life skills development.
- Next Play has also shown it can broaden horizons, raise aspirations and offer pathways for development for young people by developing self-esteem, teamwork, communication and leadership skills which can impact on citizenship, behavior and education/employability.
- The Next Play program could develop a new concept of volunteerism within the Caribbean islands and the Concacaf region. The research identified clearly that volunteering in local communities is seen as doing 'something for nothing' and especially in the youth sector where results are often not immediate. Yet there were signs that if the project targeted families, young women, people inside the communities and retired people from within football and brought a kudos and credibility to the role (kit, training, awards, stipends were examples given) then football is an arena that could change negative perceptions and provide a new cohort of local coaches and role models.

"Crime is a real issue, but football is part of the solution, with activities delivered in a fun environment overseen by trusted staff... Concacaf can be part of the solution, not just in Jamaica, but in the region."

Project staff, Jamaica

Coach development

The enthusiasm for Next Play by staff and participants is clear from the feedback and statistics gathered during this pilot program – and the importance of coach education and development to enable the project to reach its full potential is evident too. The following points were raised throughout the program:

- Training for coaches on a clear life skills/personal development curriculum for the program and continuing development in engaging at-risk young people, mentoring skills and delivering workshops (train the trainer initiatives)
- Greater access to entry-level coaching qualifications for staff, especially volunteers
- A focus on child protection and safeguarding and promotion of this in the public realm, ensuring the safety of coaches and young people alike, and reassuring parents and stakeholders that children will be safe attending these initiatives
- Equality, diversity and inclusion training to ensure coaches can engage and deliver projects that are welcoming and cater for all participants regardless of ability, ethnicity or gender
- Kit and equipment for staff to raise kudos, credibility and awareness
- Greater focus on recruiting female coaches and volunteers
- Monitoring and evaluating success

Sustainability

Sustainability is a consistent and recurring theme across all islands in the Next Play pilot program with general feedback that a number of grassroots programs come and go – often with the best of intentions – but that to create real change we need longer-term support and investment. It should be noted, however, that this was not purely a call for Concacaf to invest but an acknowledgement that a wider group of stakeholders need to be mobilized to promote and grow Next Play locally, regionally and internationally. The following stakeholders were mentioned as having the capacity to help create change in grassroots development via Next Play:

- Concacaf
- Business (Corporate sponsorships, Corporate and Social responsibility)
- Government departments
- International Charities and NGOs

“There is a real opportunity for Next Play to align itself with major international priorities and initiatives if it can present its impact and methodology in the right way... which could bring additional resources to grow and sustain the program.”

International NGO feedback
